Conservation school director on state's budget hit list

MCS's environmental programs threatened

By MICHAEL DANIELS

The state's budget problems are now threatening to gut the programs of the Maine Conservation School in Bryant Pond.

Since 1987 the state has paid for the salary and associated expenses of the school's executive director, Leslie "Buzz" Gamble, who until last year was the school's only full-time, year-round employee. The remainder of the school's roughly $175,000 operating budget comes from fund raising and the revenues generated by its various workshops and programs.

But the most recent budget proposal of state Education Commissioner Leo Martin calls for eliminating state support for the MCS executive director.

If the cuts go through, and the school is unable to raise enough additional funds to offset the loss, then Gamble's position will probably be cut as of July 1, according to Steve Wight, president of the MCS board of directors.

"The impact of this loss will be felt statewide, as the programs at the school will be dramatically altered and possibly eliminated due to this action," Wight wrote in a Feb. 9 letter to school supporters.

Hearing in Augusta Thursday
The Legislature's Joint Appropriations and Financial Affairs Committee is due to review the cut, along with a number of other educational cuts, at a meeting tomorrow in Augusta.

Both Wight and Gamble have said they plan to be at the hearing to present the case for continuing the position, but State Rep. Al Barth (R-Bethel), a member of the MCS board, was not optimistic about their chances of convincing the committee to recommend reinstating the position.

"It just doesn't look very good at this point," Barth said Monday.

Wight said there is still the possibility of the school receiving some state funding even if the executive director position is cut.

With partial state funding and stepped up fundraising it might still be possible to continue the position, he said, but if that doesn't work out the school would probably look for a part-time program person and increased volunteer help.

Wight said he has sent letters to all members of the legislature and to friends and former directors of the school, urging reinstatement of the funding.

"Thursday will let us know what direction we'll be going in," he said Monday.

Rt. 26 upgrade planned for Bethel

By MICHAEL DANIELS

The Maine Department of Transportation has announced plans to extend the widening and improvement work on Route 26 from Locke Mills village into Bethel, as far as the entrance to P.H. Chadbourne & Co.

The 1.4 miles included in the latest reconstruction proposal is planned to connect eventually with a 1.6 mile reconstruction from the Woodstock town line through the Locke Mills village. Similar Route 26 reconstruction projects have already been completed in Woodstock and on stretches of the road south of Norway/South Paris.

The Woodstock-Locke Mills project was announced in 1991 and scheduled to begin last year, but it has been held up by wetlands applications and right-of-way problems, according to Al Belz of the MDOT.

That project now appears likely to be held up until at least 1994, probably later, Belz said, but the Locke Mills-Bethel project is scheduled for the 1994 construction season.

The Locke Mills-Bethel project "is a much cleaner project, with no wetlands or bridges," Belz said.

The reconstruction work includes widening the paved portion of the road to include two 12-foot travel lanes and two 8-foot shoulders, Belz said. The work is similar to the reconstruction completed in Woodstock last summer.

The project is part of an overall upgrade project for Route 26, which was identified in the mid 1980s as a statewide economic corridor.

The project is projected to cost $1.6 million, and to be paid for with federal highway funds. No local or Jobs Bond funds are directly involved, Belz said.

Public hearing

A public hearing on the Locke Mills-Bethel project will be held Thursday, Feb. 18, at 8 p.m. in the meeting room of the Bethel Town Office.

STRETCH to shrink next year?

By WENDY HANSCOM

Telstar High School has received a $4,000 grant for its five-year-old STRETCH program, but the program has drawn some criticism from SAD 44 teachers and parents and will probably be revamped before next year, according to STRETCH coordinator Alison Aloisio of Newry.

Aloisio said next year's STRETCH program will probably be voluntary with mostly after school activities.

"The format that was originally established is not really practical or effective," Aloisio said. "It was taken on at a large scale that required everyone to participate. Everyone in the high school is involved, students and teachers."

The $4,000 grant from the Maine Department of Education, will be used to pay for ongoing STRETCH activities this year, Aloisio said. The grant is renewable for another year, but the STRETCH program will probably be reorganized and down-sized by next year, she said.

The program's goal is to have community members and business leaders act as mentors for students, Aloisio said.

STRETCH groups start in the eighth-grade and work together throughout high school.

Aloisio said the program helps students build self-esteem, provides career exploration activities and community service projects and promotes group decision making.

In addition the current program sometimes takes students out of classrooms for various activities, Aloisio said, and this aspect has drawn some complaints from parents and teachers.

"The fact that it's required of all students has been an issue," Aloisio said. "Parents have also been concerned over lost class time. We're trying to evaluate what does and doesn't work in the program."

Parent and former school board member Jeri Greenwell said she's unhappy with the way STRETCH is being run.

"The concept is a great idea," Greenwell said. "As a former board member looking at the program from the outside it seemed like a good plan. But when I became a step-mother and saw how it sometimes seemed misdirected I became frustrated with the program."

Greenwell said she was especially concerned that students who are failing some classes are missing class time due to STRETCH activities.

STRETCH steering committee member Robin Zinchuk said the

THERE WAS PLENTY OF WATER, the white sort, on the slopes of Mt. Abram on Presidents' Day, as well as plenty of cars in the parking lot and skiers in the lift line, but residents of nearby Mt. Abram village were high and dry, with no water since the beginning of the weekend and little prospect of service being restored any time soon. Mt. Abram's base lodge facilities and condos were not affected by the shortage.

Newry plans for Riley takeover discounted

Head selectman calls reports of annexation "wildly exaggerated"

By WENDY HANSCOM

It doesn't look like Riley Township will become part of Newry anytime soon, if ever, according to Newry Selectman Steve Wight.

Reports of Newry's interest in annexing the neighboring township are "wildly exaggerated," Wight said.

But the town's selectmen did bounce the idea around during last week's selectmen's meeting, he acknowledged.

"It's a pipe dream of mine that Sunday River (Ski Resort) would be easier to manage for everyone involved if it were in one town," Wight said.

But the town has no plans to attempt to annex its neighbor, Wight added.

"It's wild speculation," he said. "The town has made no official or unofficial investigation of annexing Riley."

Last year the state approved Sunday River's request to rezone 239 acres in Riley to allow for future trails, lift systems, rental units and support facilities.

Most of the land in Riley is owned by the State Bureau of Public Lands

Mt. Abram village without water

Taps dry since Saturday a.m.

By MICHAEL DANIELS

Sixty-two homes in Mt. Abram village have spent most of the weekend with little or no water, and it is uncertain how long it will be until the water is flowing again.

Some residents said they had been told by Mt. Abram management that it could be April before the problem was resolved, but late Tuesday afternoon homeowner Paula Gillies said she had been told the water could be restored as early as Thursday.

The affected homes, most but not all of which are seasonal or used primarily on weekends and holidays, get their water from a system owned by the ski area.

The water shortage has forced residents to buy up bottled water for drinking and to try to find other

Sunday River, Telstar hosting ski championships

By WENDY HANSCOM

Sunday River Ski Resort and Telstar High School are hosting State Class A alpine and nordic skiing championships this week.

In last year's State A meet, the Rebel boys finished third and the girls fifth in the overall competition, which combines nordic individual and relay results with alpine slalom and giant slalom results.

Telstar was scheduled to begin competition yesterday in the Class A alpine meet at Sunday River.

Slalom events will be held Wednesday in the resort's Coca Cola Race Arena beginning at 9:30 a.m. Giant slalom competition was held Tuesday on the adjacent Monday Morning trail.

Last year, Telstar's boys finished sixth overall in the GS and seventh in the slalom. The girls finished fourth overall in the GS and seventh in the slalom.

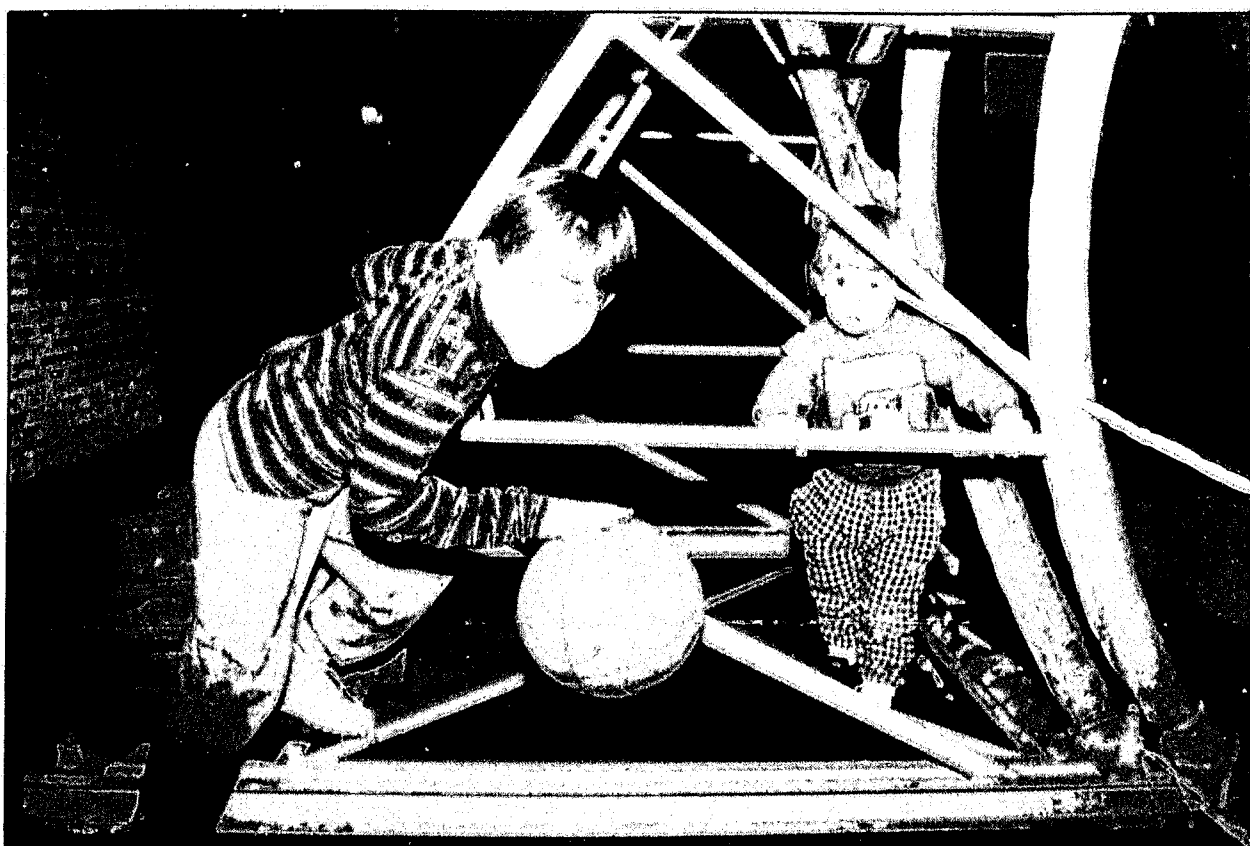

The Rebel's are also competing in the Class A nordic meet on their home trails at Telstar. The race course includes parts of new trails constructed over the summer.

The boys' state individual nordic championship was scheduled for Tuesday afternoon. The girls' individual races are scheduled for today beginning at 3 p.m.

Girls' and boys' nordic relay races begin at 10 a.m. Thursday at Telstar.

Last year the Rebel boys won the state Class A individual championship, while the Telstar girls tied for second. Both teams finished third in the relay.

Last week Sunday River and Telstar hosted the Class C state championships. Class B alpine competition will be held at Sunday River on Thursday and Friday. Telstar will host State Class B nordic events next week.

MCS deserves our help--now

Here's something we can all do for the environment. The Maine Conservation School in Bryant Pond is under the state's budget gun. If the biennial budget currently begin considered in Augusta is accepted, the school will in all probability lose its executive director--and that loss will effectively gut the school's environmental education programs.

Most of us seldom wander in to see the MCS campus or take part in its programs, so it's easy to take the school for granted. But for the thousands of its graduates MCS is a very special place indeed; for many it's the place where that first crucial, personal link with the natural world is forged; for some it's the beginning of a lifetime commitment to protecting the environment.

The school is also a sterling example of public-private synergy--the whole of its programs being far greater than the sum of the relatively small contributions that support it.

But that whole is now threatened by the proposed withdrawal of a key element in the mix, state funding of the executive director's position.

This would be a tragically short-sighted move, especially at a time when the governor himself, in his 1993 State of the State address, has called for rebuilding the state's economy by focussing on the environment, education and attracting new tourism.

There may still be time to restore the state funding, if those of us who care about the school, especially those who have taken part themselves in its activities or whose children have had that wonderful opportunity, write now. Send your letters, soon, to:

Letters to the editor

DISCIPLINE IS NOT ABUSE

To the Editor:

It is common knowledge that for the most part I am not a friend to the SAD #44 School Committee. I am often at odds with the decision process they use and rarely agree with the expenditure decisions that they make.

It is also true, however, that I do believe that the people who serve on this committee are citizens who are trying to accomplish an almost impossible task and it is very easy for me to sit on the sidelines and criticize.

I read last week's article regarding Ms. Hand and her "abuse" of her daughter and felt compelled to call her. I did promise to keep her side of the story confidential.

I will not break that promise but I will go so far as to say that I choose to believe her side of the story and agree that the amount of discipline that was given to this girl was perfectly warranted.

I am as appalled as every decent citizen should be over the issue of child abuse but I am just as appalled that decent good parents are struggling under rules that make the rearing of a decent respectful young person impossible.

We all know of parents who are being abused by their own children because of the threat of reported "child abuse" to the school system. When will it occur to all of you good minded people that this permissive society that we have created for our children has failed?

How many of us have said when walking through the IGA of some other public place, "If that was my kid."

When I was a kid if I did something wrong I got spanked. It never crossed my mind that my mother or father didn't love me. It crossed my mind in a hurry, however that maybe I better not do that again.

We have outrageous teenage pregnancy, drug abuse, child criminals and every other malice that can effect young people as in no other period of time.

We have taken our police, teachers, and worst of all, parents, from a position of loving authority to the position of abused babysitters.

This letter is not written to those of you who understand and what I am saying but rather to those of you who need to come back to a very simple basic truth--tough discipline properly applied is a signature of love and not hate or abuse.

I still reserve the right to disagree with Ms. Hand as she discharges her duties on the school committee but commend her on the energy and time that she brings to that office.

As regard to the issue of disciplining her child, because I believe her side of the story completely--atta boy, girl.

Abandoning Bethel

By BETH HITCHCOCK

(Note: for those of our readers who might be just a little weary of all this winter wonderland, and minus 30 degree mornings, The Citizen offers the following three-part account of one couple's run for the sun. It begins about this time last year.)

On a bleak mid-winter morning in February with the clock at 6 and the thermometer at minus 13 degrees, we set forth. Our carefully planned escape is underway. Zion, our golden retriever, sits bolt upright in the back seat, wedged among suitcases, canned goods, cracker boxes and cameras, audio tapes and books, snow shovels and sun hats. I keep hoping that some day, from observing our every move with marked concentration, he'll get the idea of being of some help to us--loading up the car for instance. So far he has made no move of that sort. But he is delighted to leap up into the car and shove in to a dog-shaped space. Now all he can move are his jaws, chawing away on his tennis ball--plus those eyebrows.

Bethel, unpeopled in the new morning light, looks scrupulously neat, peaceful, safe, harboring no problems, antagonisms, sadness. On the way through West Bethel, we pass half a dozen front lawns, familiar to me from having wandered through yard sale spreads. Mostly, I don't know the owners still though their former possessions grace our window sills and serve up our meals.

We travel west past pristine Mount Washington, sweeping down into the valley of Jefferson, N.H. over into Woodstock, Vt. past Killington ski area. Then, heading from Albany to Binghamton, N.Y. on I-88, we pass eight or ten-in-a-row large dairy farms. Handsome and prosperous, they space out on a flat two-mile stretch there in the near distance, each with its farm house, huge barn, high silo and browsing cows, a splendid sight.

In the gloaming of late afternoon we arrive in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., having whirled in and out of flurries, proud to have eluded the predicted storm. We stay at a cheap motel--slightly worn, cozy, just our style. The seafood dinner at Red Lobster is magnificent--even to Mainers, but our walk back to the motel is through large and driving snowflakes. We awake the next morning to three inches of snow and slush; guess spring is a bit further on. . . .

On the afternoon of our second day, Feb. 14, we arrive in Cincinnati, Ohio, where we have three overnights of love, a prolonged Valentine's Day with our son and family. Zion, too, gets lots of attention. He is constantly fallen upon, ridden and overfed by our grandson, just turned 2 and brimming with words.

A spring rain, wild and mild brings hope for warmer days, as among raindrops, we transfer much of the cramping clutter in Zion's back seat into our trailer. We had left it at our son's parking lot to avoid the first part of the wintry blast of Maine. A sensible plan, I felt, especially after I discovered that just south of Ohio is Kentucky, for heaven's sake!

Finally we're happy to be "On the Road Again"--tra-la! Our thoughts do linger, though--that little boy. But we're not sorry to see the tail end of those four cats. One especially huge and grey slumps fatly on the window sill. We think his name should be changed to T-co-Z.

Slanting southwest on I-71, across Kentucky, we travel past Louisville and down toward Bowling Green. We scrutinize the highway's embankments, and further fields and find touches of green on the brown stretches of grass. There's a deep rosy gauze flung over the tops of small oaks, a bright brassy color shows on the swaying, swaying willows; if they weep it is for joy.

When we cross over into Tennessee--heading for Memphis on US 79--a few tentative bright stars on forsythia bushes lead the way to small clusters of daffodils, mirroring the same bright yellow. What we see in the most profusion are cedar trees--hordes of them--large, medium, small and minute, stalking the roadside's banks and rocky ledges up the further slopes and on out of sight, like bands of refugees. The adult trees are apt to be in groups of three or four, together in their concern for the future, their anxiety for their offspring. They stride forward, though, to meet what might come, reaching down a low branch to urge the younger ones on. But many of those small ones wander afield or scamper ahead on sturdy rollicking roots. They are happy to be alive and with each other, their young growth topped by appealing little cowlicks flapping in the wind.

Discussing politics at a coffee stop in Tennessee, a new arrival--"the crankiest man in town," snarls, "I hope BOOSH wins. This country deserves him." The proprietress: "Mmm-Ah could go for that man Clinton-yum."

Through the gray 40-degree day, our little trailer rejoices to be in action again and does very well at keeping up and hanging on behind. However, by 4 p.m. it is content to leave the speeding, swishing highway and come to rest at a campground. We plug in to electricity, switch on our propane tank, draw water at the site in our kettle, reconstruct the cushions from the bed area into a booth area, turn on our small, bright lamp. Miraculous. Immediate home. We settle down to tea and cards.

Our little 13-foot rig gets more interest from fellow campers than the huge Air Streams or the Winnebagos, especially when we assure people that we are not carrying two standing-up horses.

Hash and eggs for supper, cooked over our two-burner gas stove and early to bed--tight quarters--to the sound of pouring rain--some wonderful sound. We think we are in for a rainy travel day tomorrow but awake deep in the night to the brilliance of a full moon.

On these journeys of ours we go to bed early and wake up early. My companion arises first and makes the coffee--ah, glorious aroma (the best part of waking up). I am plucked upright in bed like a puppet, by those steamy strands of fragrance, where I remain for the next few minutes, slow motion yanking, hauling, stretching, folding, panting--making the bed while sitting upon it. There's only room for one on the trailer floor when meal maneuverings are in progress. With that marvelous nectar, black and strong, we have fresh Italian bread, thick with butter and chunks of cheese. And now--laissez les bon temps roulez!

THIS WEEK AT THE Moses Mason House

The 19th annual Bethel Historical Society Heritage Day will be held on Saturday, Feb. 20, from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Dr. Moses Mason House on Broad Street. Among the activities featured during the afternoon will be a variety of old-time craft demonstrations and exhibits, a local art show, history videos, a local history book fair and special tours of the Dr. Moses Mason House with Indian pudding served from the hearth of the museum's winter kitchen. Everyone is welcome.

Between 1875 and 1878 William B. Lapham, who also wrote the first history of Bethel, served as editor of the "Maine Genealogist and Biographer," which contain a wide variety of sources and information regarding Maine families. In 1878, the "Maine Genealogist and Biographer" fell upon hard times and ceased publication after that date. Volumes 1-3 have recently been made available in a hard-cover edition from Parker River Researchers. In a section titled "Early Yarmouth Epitaphs" is found the following epitaph:

"As you are now, so once were we, As we are now so you must be: Prepare to meet where we have past. Then you may dwell with us at last."

A recently published book discusses Henry Tuft, whose 1817 autobiography was reissued in 1930 as "The Autobiography of a Criminal" and who in 1772 spent a winter recovering from wounds in what is today the Bethel area. He recorded high praise for Mollycodd, the Indian who ministered to his wounds very successfully. Daniel A. Cohen in his "Pillars of Salt, Monuments of Grace: New England Crime Literature and the Origins of American Popular Culture, 1674-1860" (New York: Oxford University Press, 1993) traces Tuft's criminal background from the 1760s until he received a death sentence in 1794, which was not carried out.

Rep. Richard A. Bennett (R-Norway) has been named as the Lead Republican member of the Legislature's State and Local Government Committee by House Republican Leadership.

"I am pleased to have the opportunity to serve as 'point person' for the Republican caucus," said Bennett. "It allows me to play a pivotal role in helping to determine the direction of legislation."

House Republican Leader Walter E. Whitcomb named Bennett, a two-term State Representative from Norway, as the lead Republican on the State and Local Government Committee. He is also a member of the Legal Affairs Committee and the Rules Committee.

"Republican lead representatives will play a major role this session in working to develop legislation through consensus. We will rely on them to work with their Democratic chairs to promote a joint spirit of cooperation," Whitcomb said.

"The greatest issue facing the State and Local Government Committee is clearly restructuring state government," said Bennett. "We need to take a fresh look at government at all levels and make it more Flak releases said the event was a historically, it replaced the annual State Music, a similarly dry toast affair sponsored MMA and MCCI.

The private, non-profit MMA, founded may be the most powerful lobby at the state. The MCCI is not far behind. MDL child created in 1977 and with public, bers and a state appropriation of $172, MMA claims to represent 488 "Maine towns and plantations." The numbers rect but it actually represents only the officials of those governmental units. A vidual taxpayers collectively pay the high local dues to MMA for their municipalities, only the officials have MMA's legal opinions, services, public training.

MMA's entire pitch is for the state and more of the cost of local government propaganda program suggests the state doesn't pay, local taxpayers will by additional local taxes. No mention MMA that local governments must all local budgets and restructure as does ment.

Andover dump options discussed

By BARBARA ADAMS

The Andover selectmen discussed their dump-closing options last week.

Selectman Wayne Delano said, "Personally I would like to see a tractor trailer similar to the one we have now (for recycling), and people could throw stuff into it. Also, we would have to keep the water out of it, so it may need a pitched roof. People could back up to it and throw their garbage into it."

"We would have to have a retaining wall with a trailer extending four feet above. I would think it would go three weeks before it would have to be hauled. I think it would be the cheapest way to set up and haul it. You can hire a local contractor to haul it. If we go this route, the cement work and the roof will have to be done, but obviously not until the warm weather."

Selectman chair Brian Mills said, "It is the simplest way, if you can find a trailer that dumps and isn't too much of a cost."

Selectman Raymond Hutchins said, "Unless we know we have a burn pile, white goods, and a tire pile, we are in limbo until we know what we are going to do."

The selectmen also voted last week to advertise for a part-time secretary for approximately 10 hours per week to do correspondence and meeting minutes. Pay is negotiable, the board said.

Due to the passing this week of Esther Bodwell, the board is also seeking a cleaning woman for a few hours a week.

In other business, the board voted to appoint Roger Mills as a Water District director. Mills was chosen as a third director at the Water District directors' meeting on Monday.

The board also voted to purchase three 4 x 6 ft. entryway rugs for the town office at a cost not to exceed $160. They also approved a payment of $4,548 for the purchase of salt.

Resident Sid Pew submitted to the board a petition with 19 signatures requesting that State Cable TV, now of Augusta, run cable on Farmers Hill Road. "The State Cable TV contract runs until 1998," Hutchins said, "and requires an average of 16 houses per mile." Hutchins said he felt Farmers Hill approximately meets this requirement, as Fire Chief Ken Dixon told him there are 32 houses on the road. Pew also pointed out there are 15 to 10 camps in the area.

Pew said he had also sent a copy of the petition to State Cable TV. He was also given a copy of the cable company's contract with the town.

Hutchins said he had been in touch with the Maine Municipal Association about one person running for two town positions and was told they would get back to him. Greg Peaslee is currently running for both the positions of treasurer and school board director. Hutchins also was elected a selectman and Water District director.

The selectmen had recently requested agent Al Morrison of Kyes Insurance to arrange for an I.S.O. (Insurance Service Office) rating for the town, but Hutchins said Fire Chief Ken Dixon "doesn't want to do it right now."

The Town Hall's frozen pipes have been thawed by Brooks Bros., and a bleeder put on, the selectmen said.

Hutchins said the next Andover Water District directors' meeting is at the home of secretary Evelyn Bell on Feb. 22 at 2 p.m.

Bethel posting hearing tonight

The public hearing on the proposal to post Bethel roads in the spring has been postponed until tonight, Wednesday, Feb. 17, at 7 p.m.

A hearing will also be held at that time on revisions to the towns solid waste regulations.

(Note: last week's Citizen incorrectly reported that the hearings would be held Monday evening. The hearings, and the regular selectmen's meeting to follow, were initially scheduled for Tuesday evening, because of the Monday holiday, then rescheduled to Wednesday because of the weather.)

Bennett named GOP lead on State/Local Government Comm.

Rep. Richard A. Bennett (R-Norway) has been named as the Lead Republican member of the Legislature's State and Local Government Committee by House Republican Leadership.

"I am pleased to have the opportunity to serve as 'point person' for the Republican caucus," said Bennett. "It allows me to play a pivotal role in helping to determine the direction of legislation."

House Republican Leader Walter E. Whitcomb named Bennett, a two-term State Representative from Norway, as the lead Republican on the State and Local Government Committee. He is also a member of the Legal Affairs Committee and the Rules Committee.

"Republican lead representatives will play a major role this session in working to develop legislation through consensus. We will rely on them to work with their Democrat chairs to promote a joint spirit of cooperation," Whitcomb said.

"The greatest issue facing the State and Local Government Committee is clearly restructuring state government," said Bennett. "We need to take a fresh look at government at all levels and make it more accountable and responsive."

The State and Local Government Committee deals with legislation pertaining to the Administrative Procedures Act, boards and commissions, civil service system and personnel law, commemorative days and events, constitutional amendments or resolutions, constitutional officers, organization of departments and agencies of state government, ethics in government and the Commission on Governmental Ethics and Campaign Financing, the Legislature and legislative process, the Maine State Archives, state contracts, financing, accounting, records and reimbursement procedures, state employees and officials, compensation and benefits, state employee health programs, lobbyist registration, state computer services, transfer of title to state property, county and regional government, county budgets and fiscal matters, organization and de-organization of municipalities, functions, organization and governance of villages, plantations and unorganized territories, municipal law and boundaries, quasi-municipal corporations, sheriffs and deputies and municipal and county officers and employees.

From the Bethel Police log:

Car collides with house; driver arrested for OUI

An Auburn man was arrested for operating under the influence of an intoxicating substance last Monday after his vehicle hit a West Bethel house.

Leo R. Korr, 47, of Auburn was travelling west on Route 2 when his vehicle left the road and hit the porch of David Luxton's West Bethel home.

Police officer Anne Bertram reported Korr smelled of alcohol. She administered a field sobriety test, which Korr reportedly failed. Korr was arrested for OUI. Korr was checked out at Stephen's Memorial Hospital and then taken to Oxford County Jail.

No one was seriously injured in the accident. Police estimate damage to Korr's vehicle and Luxton's house at $1,000 each.

Saturday police responded to a hit and run accident at the Sudbury Inn parking lot. Michael A. Cooley, 24, of Salem, Mass. told police his parked Chevy Blazer had been hit by another vehicle.

State Trooper Donald Shead notified police he had stopped the other vehicle possibly involved in the accident near the intersection of Route 26 and the Sunday River Road.

Daniel Etzweiler, 27, of Brookline, Mass. told Bethel police he had backed into Cooley's vehicle, but thought no damage was done.

Etzweiler was summonsed for failure to report an accident by the quickest means and leaving the scene of an accident with property damage.

Etzweiler's Volkswagen Jetta was undamaged. Cooley's rear window was shattered and the exterior spare tire holder and rear door dented. Police estimated the damage at $1,500.

In other police news last week, on Friday police responded to a two vehicle accident on Route 26. Edwin Cox, 23, of Quincy, Mass. was attempting a three-point driveway turn when he collided with Penny Savage, 26, of Bryant Pond. Police estimated damage to Cox's vehicle at $1,000 and Savage's at $1,500.

Just before midnight Friday, a Chandler Hill resident reported an abandoned snowmachine on Chandler Hill. The snowmachine was close to the road and police ordered it towed away.

Saturday evening, police had a vehicle in violation of the winter parking ban towed from Main Street. The vehicle's Camden owner could not be located.

Later in the evening, police notified a Bethel Inn employee that four vehicles were parked illegally on the Broad Street Extension. The vehicles were all moved by their owners.

Uncommon Ground

By MIKE BROWN

The power lobby flocks descended on the Augusta Civic Center last week hoping to persuade the legislators, interspersed in their feathered midst, to throw some cash feed into their feeders.

Billed as "Creating Common Ground," the talk-swapathon was sponsored by the Maine Municipal Association and Maine Chamber of Commerce, and with a kicker from the Maine Development Foundation, drew some 500 people to the capital city. Flak releases said the event was a historic first. Actually, it replaced the annual State Municipal Summit, a similarly dry toast affair sponsored by the same MMA and MCCI.

The private, non-profit MMA, founded in 1937, may be the most powerful lobby at the State Capitol. The MCCI is not far behind. MDF is a state child created in 1977 and with public/private members and a state appropriation of $172,000.

MMA claims to represent 488 "Maine cities, towns and plantations." The numbers may be correct but it actually represents only the municipal officials of those governmental units. Although individual taxpayers collectively pay the considerably high local dues to MMA for their respective municipalities, only the officials have access to MMA's legal opinions, services, publications and training.

MMA's entire pitch is for the state to pay more and more of the cost of local government. Its effective propaganda program suggests that what the state doesn't pay, local taxpayers will have to cover by additional local taxes. No mention is made by MMA that local governments must also downsize local budgets and restructure as does state government.

MCCI is the state's most influential business lobby. It has both common and uncommon ground with MMA. Commonly, the easing of environmental regulation and fewer state mandates. But MCCI wants less government, not more, but will never turn down state handouts in the form of business tax breaks.

Sandwiched between the two are state legislators who realize that the state is broke, that fiscal state handouts can only be covered by tax increases. Almost half the state's $3 billion treasury is already dedicated to local communities. The other half goes to the state's cost of education and burgeoning human services budget. What's left is the bare bone of all other state government operations. What the lobbying groups now seem to want is the marrow or the extinction of state government.

House Speaker John Martin, a legislative icon and common man proprietor of assorted private businesses, spoke for a constitutional change that will give the legislature oversight of all rules and regulations promulgated by state agencies. Considering that just one, the Dept. of Environmental Protection, has 91 new rules in the hopper for 1993, Martin's bill will be very popular both in and out of government.

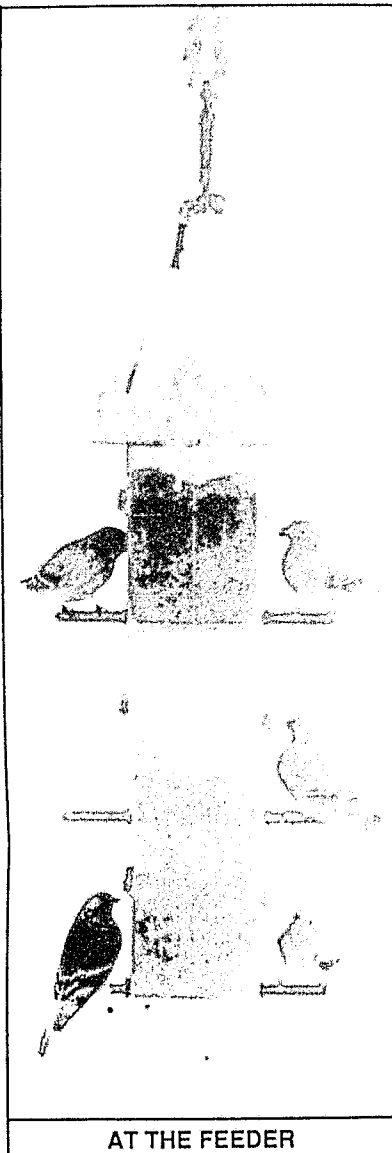

Speaker Martin's chameleon personality also spawned the comment that the governor and legislature "put aside their animosities that have occurred over the years" and work together. (As he spoke, Martin and his D-forces were holding up a full House vote on the supplemental budget that had been agreed and voted unanimous by the Democrat/Republican appropriations committee.)

Jack Dexter of MCCI bemoaned the 35,000 Maine jobs lost in the past three years and said the only way these jobs can be restored is to lower the cost of doing business in Maine so businesses can hire more people. Dexter said that Maine still has the highest Worker's comp costs in the nation. Dexter's state economic prediction for 1993? "A worse year than 1992 for the business community of Maine."

Senate Minority Leader Pam Cahill said the legislature has taken a wrong turn in the past years influenced by "people who believe that government will ever be large enough."

MMA/MCCI's event "Creating Common Ground" greatest achievement may have been the message that there isn't any.

G'wood man assaulted in home

A Greenwood man was assaulted in his home Sunday night by two masked men with guns and a knife, State Police Trooper Don Shead reported.

Douglas D. Garthe, 30, was treated at Stephens Memorial Hospital for superficial knife wounds to his chest, and was expected to be released late Sunday night, he said.

The attack occurred between 7 and 8 p.m. at the residence of Terry Martin on Hayes Hill Road, where Garthe was living alone.

"According to Mr. Garthe, two men knocked on the door. When he opened the door they assaulted him. He said they were armed," stated Shead. "They struck him with their fists and there was a knife involved. He has some superficial lacerations to his chest."

"He stated that he did not know them," he said. The two males were wearing ski masks and were also armed with guns, possibly semi-automatic pistols, the state police officer said.

No shots were fired during the assault, he said. Garthe was taken to Stephens Memorial Hospital by Tri-Town Rescue Ambulance.

"The motive right now is kind of unclear," said Shead. Garthe told police he didn't know how the two left, whether by vehicle or on foot.

Police searched the area but found no evidence of the two suspects.

"It doesn't appear that they're in the area now," he said. "We believe they left the area."

The investigation into the incident is continuing. Shead said it is the first incident of this type here.

Assisting Shead were Trooper James Jones, Sgt. Percy Turner and Game Warden Norm Lewis.

By MARTA CLEMENTS

We were all saddened this past week to learn that Bill Potter died suddenly and unexpectedly. He was the husband of our supervising principal, Judy Potter. Our hearts go out to Mrs. Potter and her family.

Judy Loper, our first-grade teacher, and Cindy Kirchherr, our Chapter I reading teacher, are part of a committee that has written and received a new federal literacy grant of $4,975. This is a Family Literacy Grant and will be used to help kindergarten and first-grade children from West Paris and South Paris learn to read better. Parents will be given training on how to encourage their children in reading and a good part of the money will be used for purchasing books to be given to the children. The first book give-away will be alphabet and number books and should take place during the week of Feb. 22. The grant was written as a joint effort with the Oxford Hills Adult Education and some of the money will be used for parents who want to improve their reading skills. Further plans and details continue to be in progress. But congratulations go to Judy Loper, Cindy Kirchherr, Theresa Copp, Michelle Armstrong, Marianne Walton, and Judy Green for their creativity, interest and hard work undertaken in this worthwhile endeavor.

We are welcoming two new students who have joined us this past week. Billy Pilgrim is in first grade, and Bobby Pilgrim is in third grade. We hope their experience at the West Paris schools will be a good one.

I hate to sound like a broken record, but these past two weeks have been so busy. The third ranking period has begun. Children are learning about Ground Hog Day, Presidents George Washington and Abraham Lincoln. The first book reports of the quarter are in progress. My fifth-graders are currently involved in reading a book report that includes their parents. The children have made up questions over the book they have read. They have invited their parents to read and then come into class for a discussion, be interviewed at home, or do a project over the book. My first two projects came in today. Jessica Farrar read "Old Bones the Wonder Horse," and her grandfather made a wooden horse to represent the book. Becky Chase read "Bunnicula," the story of a vampire bunny. She and her mom made a really neat vampire bunny out of a box, and inside the box is a scene from the book.

We are getting ready for the Klondike Derby. The sixth-graders are designing and making the annual Klondike button pins that are awarded to the winning team from each class. Rules have been retyped, questions organized, the gold created, sixth-grade mayors chosen, teachers and volunteer mounties assigned their stations and much more. The fourth-graders have completed the Maine Educational Assessment testing and are celebrating with a pizza party and early Valentine party on Wednesday. Feb. 11 is the 100th day of school and all kinds of 100-day activities are going on in the first grade and kindergarten classes. Officer Jon Tibbets presented an outline of the DARE program to fifth-grade

PESTICIDE-USE TRAINING

Instruction for vegetable and forage crop growers in need of a private pesticide applicator license will be offered 6 to 9 p.m., Tuesday, Mar. 9 and Thursday, Mar. 11 at Leavitt Area High School in Turner. Training is provided by the Maine Board of Pesticides Control and the University of Maine Cooperative Extension.

Initial training on Mar. 9 prepares individuals for the Core pesticide exam with an overview of basic pesticide safety, state and federal regulations, and environmental issues.

Instruction on Mar. 11 focuses on information found in the commodity exam through discussion of chemical and non-chemical management of pests affecting vegetable and forage crops. Applicants must pass both exams to earn a license. Core and forage commodity exams will be given at the end of the Mar. 11 session.

To prepare for these exams, participants need to read the Pesticide Education (Core) Manual and forage or vegetable crop study materials. These materials are available from the Cooperative Extension Pest Management Office at Orono, tel. 1-800-287-0279.

CPS addition gets final state funding approval

By WENDY HANSCOM

The Crescent Park School addition got its final financial approval last week from the Maine State Board of Education.

The state board unanimously voted to pay a share of the $4.93 million project.

Financing for the project is complicated. SAD 44 will take out a 20-year bond for the addition. The state will pay a share of that bond. District officials estimate that over the course of the 20-year period the state will probably pay 50 to 55 percent of the bond.

The construction bond, plus interest and financing costs should be about $8.2 million altogether.

District voters approved the addition in October. It will include 41,000 square feet of additional floor space and eliminate the need for six portable classrooms currently on the site.

A new roof is also planned for the entire existing building. The half of the building nearest the new addition will be renovated, while the other half will remain classrooms, but with some remodeling.

Groundbreaking is scheduled for mid-summer, with full occupancy by September 1994.

TAKE TWO—Cast members of Gould Academy's production "Let Me Hear You Whisper" take a break during a rehearsal last week. PLAN AHEAD FOR DISASTERS

This article is brought to you by Jane D. Gray, CPA

Recent newscasts have reminded us that no one is safe from the possibility of natural disaster. Thousands of American homes and businesses were hit this past year by hurricane damage, floods, fire, earthquakes, and tornadoes.

While you can't change Mother Nature, you can do some planning to protect your financial stability in the event a disaster strikes. Consider these suggestions:

1. Have your insurance policies reviewed by an experienced agent. Find out whether you're adequately covered for the replacement value of your home and your personal property. Also, have your agent explain exactly what natural disasters are not covered by your policy. (Many policies don't cover flood damage, for example.) You may need to purchase a supplemental policy to get complete coverage.

Business owners should consider business interruption insurance, which provides payments if your business operations are suspended because of a fire, flood, or other covered disaster.

2. Get a safe deposit box, or arrange another way to keep important papers safe. The following papers should be in safe storage: real estate deeds, auto titles, stocks and bonds, marriage and birth certificates, military service record, social security numbers, insurance policies, list of credit card account numbers, and an inventory of the contents of your home (see #3 below).

Business owners should keep financial records in fire-proof storage, and a backup of all computer files should be kept off-site.

3. In the event of a loss, you'll have to prove to the insurance company what was destroyed. So before a disaster occurs, consider taking photos or video footage of your insured possessions, or make a complete list of them. Also make a record of the purchase price or estimated value of all major items.

The Newry Mothers' Club met Monday night at the Town Building with eight members present. President Eleanor Davis opened the meeting with a reading about Valentine celebration by Gil Seeley. The president read the last report in the absence of the regular secretary, Sylvia Wight reported that the club had donated a sum of money to the "Ride-in" for the benefit of the retarded. Sunshine lady Olive Anderson reported on sending cards to the ill and shut-ins. Happy Birthday to Karlene Bachelder. No new business was planned. The mystery prize was won by Eleanor Davis. The March meeting will be on the 8th at 7:30 p.m., same place. Snack committee will be Helen Morton and Olive Anderson. The meeting was adjourned and Valentines exchanged during the snack and social hour.

Betsy Clark, Karlene Bachelder, Gil Seeley, Eleanor Davis and Sylvia Wight were at Oxford Lanes in Rumford last week. Betsy was high on the singles with one string of 111, and also was high on the triples. She had seven spares; Karlene had two spares and Gil had three spares. All went to lunch and shopping.

The temperature was 40-below zero Sunday morning, Feb. 7. The coldest since I've been living in Newry.

The Newry Firemen Ladies Auxiliary met Feb. 11 at the Town Building with seven members present. Vice-President Sheila Fleet opened the meeting in the absence of the president, who had other commitments. Treasurer Nancy Wight brought the finances up to date and mentioned that about 68 sandwiches and coffee, etc., were brought to the firemen at the Sunday River snowmaking fire recently. She reported, also, that more food needs to be purchased for the food bank.

Secretary Karlene Bachelder took notes. A gentle reminder to all the Newry families who need fire alarm detectors to please contact members on how to get them. A food sale is planned for Friday, the 19th, at the I.G.A. from 2 to 4 p.m. with tickets on sale at $1 each on a 50-50 raffle (whatever the food sale makes and tickets)--half goes to the winner to be drawn on that day. A motion was made to celebrate the five-year-old formation of the Newry Fire Dept. with a potluck supper at 5:30 at the Grange Hall on May 22, all local fire depts. are invited.

The next meeting will be Mar. 2 at 7 p.m. at the same place. New members are welcome.

On Thursday, Feb. 4, Walter and Carolyn Heino left to go to Florida for a couple weeks' visit with his sister Helen Haavista, also Walter's brother and wife, Alan and Joyce Heino. They went at a good time to miss the 30 degrees below zero weather. We were lucky to be nice and warm and no pipes frozen. Some people weren't so lucky.

Saturday, Feb. 6, Grace Nelson was taken to the Northern Cumberland Memorial Hospital in Bridgton. She had a touch of pneumonia. We visited her one day this week and she seemed quite a bit better. We have two good hospitals in the area and good doctors and nurses for when we need them. I know from experience. Hope you will be better and home soon, Grace.

On Tuesday, Feb. 9, the Stoneham Knight Riders Snowmobile Club held their potluck supper at 6 p.m. and their monthly meeting at 7 p.m. with about 20 members present. Bill Hunt explained what the MSA covers for insurance, etc. He also talked about what should be done to improve some parts of the trails in the area. Eben Harmon brought in a nice magazine rack which he had made, and it was raffled off with a total of $14 taken in. It was won by Bill Hunt. Peter and Cindy Fox and Anne and Bob Wyman reported on the Poker Rally and hot lunches at the Club House which took place on Sunday from 10 to 3 p.m. The Club House will be open next Sunday, same time, as there will be a club ride on that day. Hopefully we will have some snow for these events.

Church services are being held at the East Stoneham Church for the month of Feb.

Sunday was Boy Scout Sunday, and I was pleased to have two grandsons and a daughter-in-law attend with me.

Mildred and Laurence Dadmun are in Damariscotta a few days where she has a doctor's appointment.

Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, Hannah F. Richardson Tent 19 will meet at the home of Helen Grover on Wednesday, Feb. 17, with supper at 5:30 p.m. and meeting afterward.

Our thoughts, prayers, and sympathy are with Marge Kimball of Waterford and her family in the passing of Hervey Kimball this past week.

Marilyn Mollicone of Augusta and Alice Grant of Cape Elizabeth visited Leslie Noyes on Feb. 6 and 7.

Floribel Haines has been under the weather with a cold.

James Haines made the Honor Roll in the sixth grade at Telstar Middle School.

Florence Hastings had all frozen pipes in her house when the power went off on Feb. 7.

Leland Coolidge lost his furnace because of the brown-out on Feb. 7.

Mary Anne Toft Walton passed away on Feb. 5 in Calais Hospital. She taught school in the East Bethel School from 1938 to 1943.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bethel picked up George Bethel from U.R.I. on Feb. 12 and returned with him on Feb. 15.

What a day the 7th of Feb. was. The day started with a brown-out because the substation acted up. We lost our power completely soon after. It was gone for about four hours and the coldest day of the winter, too.

The fingers are coming along okay. The casts are moving on both fingers, so I figure the swelling has gone down. I will know more next Tuesday after the doctor's visit.

Everyone noticed the penetrating cold this last week. On Sunday morning, the 7th, my thermometers registered 30 degrees below zero.

Jack Frost left diamonds on the grasses rising above the snow. He also painted the windows on my porch with scenes of rugged mountains and a waterfall bordered with an army of ferns by its side.

The clouds above the real mountains presented a thin fibrous film moving directly overhead from north to south. Sometimes they were drawn out in webs like carded wool and at other times they dissolved like magic, yet again drifted together forming a cone between two skies, a spotless blue above a glittering cloud beneath.

A woodpecker rattled on my bag of suet and the chickadees called from the branches.

As I walked the driveway, I noticed the deer tracks beneath the apple trees where they had searched for food.

Other explorers were tiny mice immaculate in white vests and fawn coats, black eyes shining. They, too, were exploring the secrets of the sleeping woods. I could see them almost as if they were there now--an adult whitefoot in a fawn coat watching a gray-hued youngster come skittering around a tree trunk. These timid creatures of the wild had come out from the friendly shelter of the trees and gazed wonder-eyed at the change a few hours had brought.

I paused to look out on the deep wandering valley and the steepness of the hills.

From a distance I heard the laughing call of the nuthatch.

A gentle wind was rising, skirting the ridges, crawling through the hemlocks, marching among the pines. It grew sharper as I neared home and not pleasing. Facing the house, now the eaves have petticoats showing, while wearing a sequined mantle, frosted windows with forests of ferns and one red geranium against it all.

In my column last week I wrote of things I had in my scrapbook, one of which was the size of the largest fish that I had caught. It measured 21 inches in length, not 11.

The family had a nice gathering at the Hollis on Sunday. Mary opened a mystery package which was fun for all.

The Innans have had several visitors and Milton went ice fishing and was lucky.

John Betts' brother came to see them over the weekend.

Quit smoking.

Olive received 40 cards over a period of three days as well as many gifts.

I thank all of my friends for their cards and gifts, and thanks for the musical entertainment put on by the group with Charlotte Cole and her faithful guitar and all the singers who sang along. Also, Dot, who played the yamaha. After Richard came, Dot and Richard played on his harmonica with her. It was so entertaining and such a pleasure to have all your friends around.

This has been a strange week, at least for us. The cold caused numerous cars not to start and the power being out certainly caused problems for a lot of people. I didn't think it affected us much; we have wood stoves which, as long as the wood and our strength to fill them hold out, keep us nice and toasty. But when I went to use the phone Monday it was out. Since I dispatched for Tri-Town Monday evening, rather panicked me, but I was able to use another's phone to get a message for me. That taken care of I figured the rest would be a snap. I was wrong. So I hunted for the bill, used that number and three hours later my phone was back. I am trying to live in the 90's with a 60 mentality. It puts me to a disadvantage sometimes, but ho-

Saturday, Feb. 6, was a cold night. My brother-in-law Joe Vatcher called at 11 p.m. and said C.M.P. said it was a blackout, so I kept my kitchen fire going until the furnace came back on at 1:30 a.m. Sunday. A lot of people had frozen pipes--32-below zero at Joe Vatcher's. A lot of people at the West Paris dance said, "Thank the Lord for the bright moonlight."

On Wednesday, Feb. 10, I visited the Richard Felts, the first time since Christmas day.

Mary Lovejoy would like to thank everyone who cooked pies for Irving Cole's benefit dance. A very good crowd, if it was 20-below zero. Everyone had a good time. I bet Irving is pleased.

Sympathy is extended to the family of Helen Ring. She was one of my teachers at Pinhook school.

Tuesday, Mar. 2, West Paris Senior Citizens will meet at the Baptist Church parking lot to go to the Bull Ring Restaurant at Oxford for luncheon. Be thinking about it, because you will be called to see how many will go.

Saturday, Feb. 20 there will be a benefit dance at West Sumner Grange Hall for Lewis and Myrtle Bisbee. They have had a lot of hard luck and sickness. Music by Richard Felt's Band and good refreshments.

I would like to thank Sherry Thayer for doing errands and getting groceries for me, and Joe Vatcher and Madge for what they did in the past weeks.

Howdy folks, this is Tuesday, Feb. 9, and what a beautiful and mild morning. It is just zero here this morning, rather mild compared to last Saturday and Sunday mornings. Peggy and I have been on the go, as you can imagine. A week ago today we went to Lewiston. Peggy had her picture taken at Sears a while back, so we went to get the pictures. She was quite happy with them, but still thinks they might have been a bit better, but, as I told her, the camera can only take what it sees. After picking up her pictures, we visited Viva in Auburn. We had taken down some vegetable beef soup, so Viva had lunch with us. This was the afternoon that Bertha Benoit fell in her yard, breaking her left hip and badly bruising her shoulder. She is in room 231 at Stephens Memorial. That evening Peggy and I went to Youth Night at Oxford Pomona Grange. Oxford Grange hosted this meeting.

The following day Bertha had hip surgery in the morning, and we went to visit her in the afternoon. Several were coming in to see her and bringing flowers. We were surprised to see her looking and acting so well. After we had visited Bertha for a while, we went over to Norway Convalescent Home to visit Verna Swan. We found her feeling quite well and enjoying her roommate, who seemed to be a real jolly type person. The roommate has been there five years.

On Feb. 4 we went to town in the afternoon for groceries and to do several errands. It was time for me to make by budget payment on oil from Gendron Oil Co. With this cold weather, I think I'd better keep on the good side of them if at all possible. I had to help out Laverdiere's Pharmacy by getting another prescription filled. We visited Bertha Benoit at the hospital, and while there I got a needed blood test. We picked up groceries before we returned home. In the evening we attended visiting hours for Edna Cole at Greenleaf's Funeral Home in Bethel. A cure for all cancer would be a blessing.

Peggy had a long day on Friday doing her card work at Laverdiere's. On her way home she visited Bertha Benoit at Stephens Memorial Hospital. This was a real spring-like day with temperature getting up quite high. I went for a nice walk in the afternoon and visited with Lawrence and Grace Yates for a short time on my way home. Sister Laura called that she had the flu and upper respiratory infection, also her back had gone out of alignment, so when Peggy did get home she packed up her pajamas and other necessities and was off for East Andover. Saturday was a real cold, miserable day and I stayed inside. Peggy had promised a pie to help out on refreshments at the West Paris Grange dance, but as she was gone I made two pumpkin pies for them and some muffins for myself. I hadn't made a pie for years and don't know whether they were edible or not, but I hope they were. I hope none of the dancers suffered any ill effects from eating my pumpkin pie. Hopefully, Tums took care of the distress.

Sunday morning was super cold with the temperature here going down to 19 degrees below zero and much colder in many other places. It seemed almost like a heat wave in the late afternoon when the temperature got up to 14 degrees above zero. In the afternoon I got outside for a while to exercise around some. Wendall and Toby Whitman called to get a bureau that Viva wanted them to have. Peggy got home from Laura's later in the afternoon, as she had to be back for more card work the next day. After she had been back for a little while, we looked out the back windows of the mobile home to see six deer up back in the field. We have enjoyed the kale I raised this winter, but that has come to a close as the deer have found that they like it, too. All that is left is the tall, straight stalks that are so tough that the Devil himself couldn't chew them. The field up back looks like the deer had played the game of Fox and Geese up there. They can have all the fun they want this winter, but when it comes time to plant my garden again, I'll have to hang out my dirty, sweaty shirts to keep them out of my garden. This works, as I am the biggest stinker around.

Yesterday was a reasonably nice winter day. Peggy was gone and I drove myself down for my appointment with Dr. Ware. I was pleased that my report was good.

Mary Lovejoy wishes to thank all of the people that have cooked for the last two dances at West Paris Grange Hall. It was a big help and very much appreciated.

The Raymond Macks attended the supper at the First Congo Church in West Paris Saturday night.

On Sunday the Macks went to church, then out to lunch using some gift certificates they had been given for Christmas. As often happens, they had visitors who found them gone.

I must call your attention to the Feb. 20 dance which will be at West Sumner Grange Hall. The Richard Felt Orchestra will furnish the music.

Evelyn Bean presents ring

Evelyn Bean of Woodstock recently presented her late husband's Knights of Pythias ring to lodge member Clyde C. Barker because of his devotion to the organization.

The presentation was made at the officers' installation ceremonies at Alpha Marathon Lodge in Strong, where Barker is a member. He is also grand guard of the Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias of Maine.

Bean told the lodge members and Pythian Sisters from Cleopatra Temple that her husband, Chester C. Bean, was "a faithful Pythian who loved the Order." He was a member of the former Fraternal Lodge, Knights of Pythias, in Woodstock and served as chancellor.

Bean said she gave her husband a Knights of Pythias ring 43 years ago and has kept it since his death 12 years ago with the idea of presenting it to someone as devoted to the organization as he was.

Barker was selected for the honor for demonstrating the faithfulness to the order, Bean said. He has been especially active over the past four years.

Barker received a certificate honoring his outstanding dedication to the Lodge.

Bean, a past grand chief of the Grand Temple of Pythian Sisters of Maine, served as installing officer for the Cleopatra Temple ceremonies.

of students since 1957. The school's offerings last year included week-long residence programs for middle-school level students, day trips for younger students, own-day community events, such as recycling workshops and earth day celebrations, college level summer courses, an Elder Hostel program.

More than 1,000 youngsters took part in MCS activities last year, Gamble said.

The MCS facilities are also used for meetings by community groups such as the Lakes Association of Woodstock and Greenwood and the Mahoosuc Land Trust.

The school is based on a bequest from Lillian Waterhouse, who stipulated its perpetual and exclusive use for conservation education and who provided a small endowment.

MCS has been run as a private, non-profit corporation with an ever-changing web of private and public support. It currently has a 24-member board of directors.

Gamble was the school's only full-time employee from 1987 until July 1991, when Chaitanya York, a board member at the time, was hired as a full-time fund-raiser.

Recent fund-raising projects include $60,000 for a septic system installed last summer, and a $200,000 capital improvement campaign planned for the coming year.

program has been modified yearly, but another recent problem is kids playing hooky on STRETCH days.

Seven or eight STRETCH days were scheduled this year, Zinchuk said. The students are out of classes for part of the day, not a full school day, she said.

"There's a high absentee rate on STRETCH days among older students," Zinchuk said. "There are still a lot of decisions to make regarding the program. We still want to keep the program's original goals, which are to open up options for kids—to let kids see what the community has to offer."

A recent survey of STRETCH participants showed that what the students liked most were on-site visits to colleges and workplaces, Aloisio said. Those activities as well as community service projects will probably continue next year, she said.

Some of the funds from the Department of Education grant may also be used to start a small-scale pilot program similar to STRETCH in a SAD 44 elementary school, Aloisio said. The program would benefit elementary students who lack an adult role model in their lives, she said.

The $4,000 grant was awarded in partnership with the Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce.

Water

places to do their laundry and shower.

Gillies, who is also a rental agent, said she has had to relocate holiday-week renters from two chalets in the village.

The condos at Mt. Abram and the ski facilities themselves have apparently not been affected by the problem.

The system began going dry Friday evening, for reasons which are not yet clear, and as of Monday evening a few homes had trickles of water, but most were dry, according to 16 homeowners who turned out for a meeting to discuss the problem.

The two-hour meeting was often heated and emotional, as the homeowners complained of Mt. Abram's management's refusal to communicate with the residents or to take steps to deal with the problem. (Repeated calls from The Citizen to Mt. Abram owner Don Cross and manager Lloyd Carver were not returned.)

Two residents said they had been told by Cross that they would have to wait "until April," to have the problem fixed.

Others with contracting experience said they had offered to identify and fix the problem, but Cross and Carver turned the offers down.

The timing of the outage also compounded the problem for the village residents, many of whom planned to ski during the school holidays. The state's Department of Human Services' Drinking Water Program regulates private water systems such as the one in the village, but the state offices were closed over the weekend, and on Monday for the holiday, and again on Tuesday for a state-employee furlough day.

This is not the first problem residents have had with the village water system. In late October Cross wrote residents to inform them that for the previous two months water in the system had exceeded the maximum contaminant levels set for coliform bacteria.

Homeowner Karen Hakala said that about the time they received the letter, some residents noted a very strong chlorine odor in the water, but they then heard nothing more from Mt. Abram about the matter.

Village residents have no choice but to be on the Mt. Abram water system, which costs $168 a year for seasonal residents and $262 for year-round residents.

Deed restrictions require that they hook up to the system, and, in any case, most of the lots are too small to allow for private wells to be drilled.

Hakala said Cross has recently offered to sell the system to the residents for $10,000.

(Note: Karen Hakala is the advertising manager for The Bethel Citizen.)

LATE NOTE:

Just prior to The Citizen's final deadline Tuesday, Paula Gillies told the newspaper that she had been contacted by Lloyd Carver, who said Mt. Abram was working with the state Department of Human Services to resolve the problem, and that plans were being made to get water from the Bethel Water District. Gillies said that she had been told by Carver that the water could be on by as early as Thursday.

Bethel Water District Superintendent Bob Saunders confirmed Tuesday afternoon he had been contacted by Don Cross and had tentatively agreed to provide water for the Mt. Abram village residents.

Newry

and International Paper, Co., according to Oxford County Commissioner Norman Ferguson Jr. of Hanover. One gravel road provides access to a few seasonal dwellings in the township, Ferguson said.

Sunday River's slopes and mountainside developments are now all in Newry, Wight said. Municipal services like fire protection and trash disposal might get complicated if Oxford County and state officials got involved in Sunday River's proposed expansion into Riley, he said.

"There'd be a lot more players involved," Wight said. "It just seems to me it's cleaner if the development is in one town."

Who would benefit?

If Sunday River expands into Riley Township, residents of all unorganized townships in Maine will likely benefit, according to Rudy Orff of the State Bureau of Taxation.

The resort would pay property taxes to the state on any new development in Riley. Those taxes would go into two tax pools, Orff said.

Sunday River would contribute to a state tax pool which helps provide services such as welfare benefits and educational fees for all residents of unorganized townships in Maine Orff said.

Some of the resort's tax fund would also go into a second pool that helps pay for county services, such as police protection and road maintenance in all unorganized territories in Oxford County.

Orff said each year the state raises only the money it needs that year to provide services to all unorganized township residents in the state.

If Sunday River's Riley expansion required little support services from the state and/or county, then the new tax revenue could decrease property taxes in other unorganized townships, he said.

But if Riley were part of Newry, Wight said, Sunday River's property tax money would go to the town, and about 70 percent of it would probably wind up in SAD 44's coffers. That could lower school assessment taxes in other district towns, he said.

"I'm still trying to promote regionalism," Wight said. "Sunday River expansion is not just a windfall for Newry. It's a windfall for the whole area."

But for now at least it looks like Riley will remain unorganized, Wight said.

Ask a Lawyer--

I have a legal problem and would like to hire a lawyer. I am afraid of the potential expense. How can I control the legal costs?

People can control legal costs by establishing goals for their representation, communicating clearly with their lawyer about fees, and using their lawyer's time and skills efficiently.

There are several factors that determine the size of legal costs. The skill and experience of the attorney and the difficulty of the case are important, but inevitably the amount of time and effort required by the attorney influences the bill. A client can control the costs by limiting the time the lawyer needs to effectively represent you.

The first objective should be to establish clear goals. You know your needs; your attorney knows what is possible, and what effort and expense will be needed to accomplish your goals. Discussing your objectives in advance will help you decide which ones you believe are worth the cost.

Discuss fees in advance. If you have a predetermined amount you want to spend, let your lawyer know. Your lawyer is willing to discuss with you how he or she bills for specific services. You can then use your budget and the fee method to guide you in your selection of work to be done. There are also options for how services can be charged. Some cases can be done for a percentage of your winnings. Some services are handled on a flat fee basis, particularly preparation of standard documents. If you have a continuing need for legal consultation, a flat retainer to cover all or most of your conversations may be possible.

Use your lawyer's time wisely. Write down the names, addresses and telephone numbers of all people with information about your case. Bring all of the paperwork to your first conference. Tell your lawyer everything, good or bad, and don't let emotion color the accuracy of your facts. Avoid unnecessary telephone calls. If you call daily to get an update, or to discuss every new event, don't be surprised if you get charged for that time. Buy a notebook and use it to write down the questions you have, or to keep track of what has happened. You can then write your lawyer a note, or schedule a single appointment (in person or by telephone) to go over your questions. This will save each of you time and money.

Be sure to consult with your lawyer before signing documents or reaching agreements. It is always cheaper to avoid a problem than to try to undo a problem.

It is not always possible to predict with certainty the complexity of a legal problem or case in advance. Your goals may change or your lawyer may have to respond to unanticipated actions by others. Communicating clearly and regularly about legal costs, and working jointly to limit the time needed, is the best way to control your legal expense.

Bethel b changes

By DUANE HAYES

Proposed changes in the site plan ordinance were discussed last Wednesday during a joint meeting of the Planning Board and Board of Selectmen.

Planning Board member Stan Howe said the way the proposals address the issue of screening along property lines businesses is "much too vague" and the provision should be more specific and careful than should be put into the final version.

As the proposal stands now, said, it is not clear to business owners whether they have to completely close off the view, or plant a few trees or bushes.

He said the screening rule caused problems in several cases.

Arlan Jordrey, chairman of Board of Selectmen, said "Howe has some good points."

"I agree with Stan that we need to take our time here, have a lot of input, and do this thing right," Jordrey said.

By BARBARA ADAMS

Roger Mills was named as third director of the Andover V District at last week's district meeting. Mills will serve as director, joining directors Ray Hutchins and Arthur Myhrall, a formal election is held at the district's annual meeting in May.

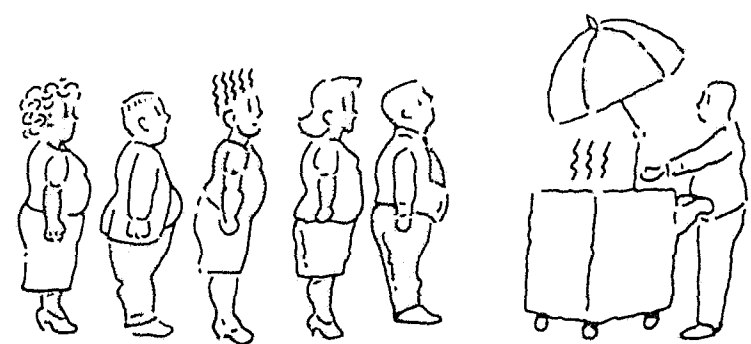

Alex Legault, who was considered for the position, has declined to be director, stating he was "involved enough public service."

Howard Spidell was chosen to serve in an advisory capacity on Board of Directors and will continue to be covered by Workmen's Compensation and liability insurance. Increased rates for the district-approved water system

Gould offers two "one-acts"

Two months of hard work for Gould Drama have prepared the students for an opening of their two "one-acts" on Feb. 19 and 20 at 7:30 in Bingham Hall. The shows being presented are a comedy and drama: the former called, "Cinderella Wore Combat Boots," an adaptation of the classic Cinderella story by Jerry Chase.

The latter show is "Let Me Hear You Whisper," written by the renowned playwright, Paul Zindel.

Each show is unique and engaging. "Cinderella" was first presented as street theater on the streets of N.Y.C., so the story has been humorously adapted for contemporary times and the urban scene.

"Whisper" was originally presented on the National Educational Television Network in 1969. The story deals with the ethics of animal research, specifically dolphin experimentation. Creative technical effects have been developed to suggest the presence of the dolphin. The play also sensitively explores the potential for binding relationships between dolphins and humans.

The members of the "Cinderella" cast are: Kendra Hutchinson, Kevin Edge, Danny Barker, Phoebe Hausman-Rogers, Rachel Slack, Emily Roy, Maeve Lurgis and M.J. Reed, with Anneliese Bass stage managing. The members of the "Whisper" cast are: Jill Nowak, Sigrid Stanley, Hannah Quimby, Anneliese Bass, Bonnie Crocker, and Hillary Harrison with Jaime Powers stage managing. The tech crew who have been conscientiously laboring for both shows are: Cindy Wheeler (who will be running some of the technical effects during "Whisper"), Tracy Bachelder (also running lights for both shows), Hannah Quimby, Hillary Harrison, Sigrid Stanley, Anneliese Bass and Bonnie Crocker. Quentin Stockwell has assisted with construction and lighting, and will be running some technical effects.

A major design contributor to the special effects is Earl Lamoreau. The technical director, Vicki Rackliffe, has creatively pieced both shows together with her crew. The director is Kathy Slack Lamoreau who looks forward to her debut as a director in the Bethel area. This event is free and open to the public.

RUMFORD JOB SERVICE OFFICE HOURS TO CHANGE

This office will close at noon every Friday.

USDA - Forest Service
Evans Notch Ranger District
White Mountain National Forest
Albany Township
Oxford County, Maine

The White Mountain National Forest is proposing a fish habitat improvement project on Evans Brook, which would result in the construction of 7 instream structures during the summer of 1993. The objectives of the project are to 1) increase hiding cover, 2) provide a wider variety of habitats, and 3) improve bank stability. Our goal is to enhance the habitat for Eastern brook trout especially during the winter months when pool habitat is critical for survival. We are accepting comments on this proposal until March 12, 1993. To obtain more information please contact Lesley Rowse at the Evans Notch Ranger District, RR #2, Box 2270, Bethel, Maine 04217 or call (207) 824-2134.

The application will be filed for public inspection at the Department's Office in Augusta and at the Newry Town Office on Wednesday, February 17, 1993.

Written comments and/or request for a public hearing from an interested person must be sent to the Department of Environmental Protection, State House Station #17, Augusta, Maine 04333, within 14 days of filing the application to receive consideration. A public hearing may or may not be held at the discretion of the Commissioner or Board of Environmental Protection.

m. Purpose of Project: The purpose of the project is to generate energy for sale to Central Maine Power Company. n. The application for license for this project was originally filed as part of Project No. 9340, which originally included both the upper and lower Kazar Falls developments. On May 3, 1991, in response to a petition for rehearing of the licensing order for Project No. 9340 (which licensed both developments), the Commission modified the license by removing the upper development, created project No. 11124 for the upper development, and directed the applicants to conduct certain flow studies. The flow studies have been completed and filed.

o. This notice also consists of the following standard paragraphs: A4 and D10. p. Available Location of Application: A copy of the application, as amended and supplemented, is available for inspection and reproduction at the Commission's Public Reference and Files Maintenance Branch, located at 941 North Capitol Street, N.E., Room 3104, Washington, D.C., 20268, or by calling (202) 205-1371. A copy is also available for inspection and reproduction at Kleinschmidt Associates, 75 Main Street, Pittsfield, ME 04967.

Under the Commission's regulations, any competing development application must be filed in response to and in compliance with the public notice of the initial development application. No competing applications or notices of intent may be filed in response to this notice.

D10. Filing and Service of Responsive Documents-- The application is ready for environmental analysis at this time, and the Commission is reviewing comments, reply comments, recommendations, terms and conditions, and prescriptions.

The Bethel Area Clergy Association invites interested singers and learners of the area to a Lenten study and music series focused on the "Requiem" by Gabriel Faure.

Each Wednesday evening at 6:30, beginning Feb. 24, a portion of this musical setting of the requiem mass will be the focus of a 30-minute reflection and discussion. Following this time to reflect, those present who wish to sing will rehearse the section of the Requiem which was just discussed. Rehearsals will end before 8 P.M.

THOUGHTS FROM THE Pastor's Study

The Bethel Area Clergy Association, with the help of pastors of surrounding churches, brings you these meditations. Not based on any set theme, they will be individual for each pastor. It is hoped you will find in these words comfort and hope for your daily life.

During these winter days in the month of February, I feel an uplifting sense of joy and wonder as I sit by a window of the parsonage looking outward. That is looking outward and see on a sunny day the sun shining on the whiteness of the snow. And, while looking outward where the birds flit back and forth to the feeder and the nuthatch or woodpecker works at the suet hanging on the nearby poplar tree, I feel the warmth and brilliance and wonder of the sun's rays alighting upon me. What a good, magnificent feeling. Yes. A gift for that day to carry with me not only that day but an image to bring forth on days when the sun does not shine so brightly.

It is next week, on Ash Wednesday, that Lent begins. Lent, a religious season of 40 days (not counting Sundays) that precedes Sunday. A time when we look upon Jesus' life, that of God's only begotten son, and see/continue to grow in our knowing Jesus. Yes. Knowing Jesus through his teachings, his model--his/God's love for men, women, and children. And, hopefully, we will let, allow that wonderful and mysterious love flow into our lives--strengthening, enriching, and even turning our shortcomings around to better ways. Yes.

Lent--each year a part of our faith journey. A time to let God's "Light" and love shine upon us. A time to grow in God's/Jesus' ways. A time when we are reminded, once again, that God covenants with us and continues to be with us.

You Are Welcome at The Bethel Alliance Church

Many folks have found church to be cold and unfriendly. Some feel the sermons are boring and unrelated to life. Others feel the church puts a guilt trip on them. Many see the church as only interested in their money.

We want Bethel Alliance to be different. We want you to know we are interested in you and hope you sense a warm and friendly spirit here. We think Sunday should be the best day of the week, and attending Bethel Alliance an event that both adults and children enjoy. We are a long way from perfection, but we offer a one hour worship service that is meaningful, messages that are relevant and relationships that are sincere and genuine.

Whether you are married, single or divorced; turned off by organized religion or tuned out of the traditional church; you truly matter to us, because you matter to God.

Services:
Sunday Worship: 10:00 a.m. and 6:00 p.m.
School for Christian Living (Sunday School): 9:00 a.m. Sundays
Prayer Meetings: Wednesday's at 7:00 p.m.
